Rules for Household Composition

Colorado Covering Kids and Families

New Household Composition

- Household composition is determined on an individual basis
- Household composition for each individual in the case is determined based on the Tax-Filer rules or the Non-Filer rules
- Each individual in the case will have a household created with the individual as the eligible person (adult or child) and others in the case showing as “counted” or “excluded” based on the new rules

Colorado Covering Kids and Families

3 Questions

- Does the individual expect to file taxes?
- Does the individual expect to be claimed as a tax dependent by anyone else?
- Do any exceptions apply for the tax dependents?

Colorado Covering Kids and Families

Tax Filer

- A taxpayer is a person who files and pays taxes, as an individual or for the family.
- A taxpayer can be an individual or a married couple.
- A taxpayer can take exemptions which reduce the taxpayer's taxable income.
- Cannot be considered a filer if claimed as dependent

Colorado Covering Kids and Families

Tax Dependent

- A Tax Dependent can be a “Qualifying Child” or a “Qualifying Relative”
- Does not matter if they file their own taxes
- A household member is counted as a Tax Dependent if he/she is claimed as such by the Tax Payer and does not meet the following exceptions

Colorado Covering Kids and Families

3 Exceptions

- Tax dependent claimed by someone other than parent/spouse
- Tax dependent under age 19 living with both parents who are not filing a joint return
- Tax dependent under age 19 claimed by a non-custodial parent

Colorado Covering Kids and Families

Rules for Tax Dependents

- If the household member does not meet any of the exceptions, then the Tax Filer rules apply BUT also include the individuals' spouse if in the home
- If the household member meets any exception, then follow the Non-Filer rules

Colorado Covering Kids and Families

Household Size

- Each individual on an application or case's household might be a different size, depending on their household composition
- A pregnant woman's household includes the number of children she is expecting

Questions about income? Read Colorado's Rule 8.100.3.k

Q. If a parent follows the non-custodial parent rule; one year mom claims the child/children and the next year the dad claims the child/children, should the application reflect the parent who claimed the child this year, or the parent who will claim the child on their next taxes?

A. The household composition is based on how they anticipate filing taxes. The child's household should include the parent who will claim them and any other siblings.

Q. For a child who lives with both parents but will be claimed by one parent because the parents are not filing jointly, is the child considered part of the household of the parent claiming the child, or would the child be considered a part of the both of the parent's households?

A. If the mother and father are living together in the same household, the spouse of the parent who claims the child will be included even if the parents are not filing jointly. This includes common-law marriage because they are representing themselves as being married. Both of the parents' incomes would count.

Q. In a family of a pregnant wife, husband, and one child, would the unborn child count for each family member's household assuming the husband and wife file taxes jointly?

A. For the wife, her household size will consist of herself, her husband, 1 child, and unborn child (4). For everyone else in the family, their household size will consist of husband, wife, and child (3), until the baby is born. When the baby is born each family member's household size will be 4.

Q. Does the income chart include the disregard?

A. No, the income chart is pre-disregard.

Q. On the attached income chart, why are kids listed at 142% FPL and pregnant women at 195% FPL?

A. The Medicaid expansion covers adults at or below 133% FPL, where before, the income limits were much lower. Medicaid eligibility for children and pregnant women is higher to compensate for the loss of income disregards that had been applied to their income determination prior to the Affordable Care Act. MAGI does not have any of the old income disregards and only has an across the board 5% disregard. Part of the Affordable Care Act ensures that no one will lose their coverage due to MAGI implementation. The state decided that 142% and 195% income levels would ensure that children and pregnant women wouldn't become ineligible for Medicaid because of the switch to MAGI.

Q. Self-employment is done through a ledger for Medicaid, does Connect for Health Colorado use the adjusted gross income from the front of the tax return or do they use the information from the Medicaid profit loss page?

A. Connect for Health Colorado uses the applicant's expected annual adjusted gross income to determine financial assistance eligibility. In the event that Connect for Health Colorado is unable to verify an applicant's income through electronic databases, additional information, such as the profit loss ledger used by Medicaid may be requested by Connect for Health Colorado from the applicant.

Q. A single, self-employed woman is a real estate broker. Because of her job, her income fluctuates from month to month. Her income has been $0 since January 1, however, she has a closing this month, which should provide her with $5,000 income. It is assumed that when income checks are run quarterly she will lose her coverage. Her income is less than $15,000 each year. How can we work to ensure continuous coverage?

A. She should apply self-attesting her actual income this month (as of today) and the prior month. Do not include her prospective income or a yearly average because things may change. After the closing, she has 10 days to notify Medicaid that her income has changed. If she is denied Medicaid for being over the monthly income amount and applies for and is denied financial assistance through Connect for Health Colorado because she is under the yearly income amount she should appeal to Connect for Health Colorado. The Medicaid and Connect for Health Colorado appeals teams will look at the yearly income and determine appropriate eligibility on a case-by-case basis in such situations.

Q. Is Social Security income counted when calculating MAGI?

A. Social Security Insurance (SSI) title XIV income is not counted and recipients will be automatically enrolled in Medicaid, however, Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) and Title II income is countable. Medicaid income rule 8.100.3.K clarifies what income is counted.

Q. Are VA benefits counted as income?

A. Yes. Medicaid income rule 8.100.3.K clarifies what income is counted.

Q. If a tax filer is a permanent resident with an undocumented spouse and child, can he count them as part of his household? He did not claim them on his taxes for risk of deportation.

A. For Medical Assistance purposes, the spouse and dependents should be included on the permanent resident's application. Medicaid is a non-reporting agency. Citizenship status information will not be shared with other agencies.
